Synopsis:

Having crashed his car after fleeing the ski lodge where his friends were brutally murdered by General Herzog and his squadron of Nazi zombies, Martin wakes up in hospital attempting to convince the local authorities that he is not responsible for their deaths.

Little do they know the undead fascists are very much still 'living' and marching on the town and what's worse, they have a tank! With time running out it's up to Martin and his new American allies to save the town from total annihilation and defeat Herzog and his men once and for all.

We like it because:

Bigger, bolder and bloodier, Dead Snow 2: Red Vs. Dead is severed heads and shoulders above the first instalment and has some of the most inventive zombie kills ever seen on film.

Perfectly balanced with enough blood to fill an army of tanks, Dead Snow 2 has a wickedly dark sense of humour and is truly one of the funniest films of the year filled with laugh out loud moments, outrageous gore and jaw-dropping visual gags that are unlike anything you've seen before.
